FIRE IN FRAME COTTAGE KILLS FAMILY OF FIVE

Parents, Three Children Die Near Fremont; Explosion Of Stove Blamed

ALL LIE CLOSE TO DOOR

Flames Prevent Victims From Fleeing Through Single Opening

FREMONT, O., May 22—A family of five burned to death early today when a fire believed to have been started by an explosion in a gasoline stove swept through the two-room frame cottage of Frank Townsend, two miles from Fremont, and prevented the victims from escaping through the single door of the dwelling.

The bodies of Townsend, 34, his wife, Elsie, 30, and three children, Jay, 10; Janice, 5, and Frank, 3, were found charred almost beyond recognition before the door.

The cottage was a two-story affair, with one room above the other. Fire Chief Tom Lahy said he believed Townsend got his family to the first floor but was unable to get through a mass of flames to the door.

Windows Not Used
There were several windows in the cottage but none apparently was used as a possible means of escape, Lahy said.

W. M. Slane, a neighbor, living in a cottage only 20 feet from the Townsends, discovered the blaze as he arose to make breakfast.

With his two sons, Slane tried to effect a rescue but flames prevented him from getting close to the door. Slane said he heard no screams from within, which, according to Chief Lahy, indicated the victims suffocated.

Townsend was employed at an auto wrecking yard in Fremont.

LABORERS TURN DOWN PACT, U. S. CLOSES ARSENAL

RAVENNA, O., May 22—Gates at the Ravenna arsenal plant were locked by the U. S. Army today, after 5,000 workers on common labor projects apparently refused an agreement between a strikers' committee and officials of the Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co., to call a 10-day truce pending completion of wage negotiations.

Almost 7,000 carpenters, iron workers and other skilled craftsmen, meanwhile were ordered to stand by until further notice resulting in a temporary stoppage of work.

The 5,000 workers left the plant yesterday, demanding wage increases of as high as 25 cents an hour.

The temporary truce was to be in effect until negotiations were completed but on entering the plant this morning the A. F. of L. International Hod Carriers, Builders and Common Laborer's unionists refused to go to work.

Army officials who sat in on the conferences said the unionists apparently were not accepting the strikers committee's truce measure. The Army officials also charged that the strike was unauthorized by union heads and that it was caused by "apparent agitators" among the common laborers.

There was no picketing but when striking workers began milling around the plant yards instead of returning to their jobs the Army locked the gates.

VOTE ON CONVOY TO BE PRESSED

Petition To Discharge Foreign Committee To Be Presented

WASHINGTON, May 22—The anti-convoys fight, temporarily suppressed in the senate, will be raised in the House next week in a drive to force a vote on the issue through a petition to discharge the Foreign Affairs Committee, it was disclosed today.

The House anti-convoys bloc, it was learned, has quietly laid plans for a spectacular movement in the belief that they can command enough strength to force a vote over objections of the House leadership.

The plan is for Rep. Curtis (R) Neb., to place on the speaker's desk a petition to call his anti-convoys bill to the floor for a vote on consideration. If 218 members, a bare majority, sign the petition, the showdown can be obtained.

The Curtis petition, which will become valid after his resolution has been pigeon-holed in the Foreign Affairs Committee for 30 days without action, calls for a vote on a resolution prohibiting use of armed forces "for transporting, delivering or conveying articles or materials to belligerent countries."

"A petition will be filed and we will make a drive for signatures," said Rep. Mundt (R) S. D., a leader of the anti-convoys group. "We think we can bring the issue to a vote and pass a resolution."

"We think all but five or six Republicans will go along, and we know many Democrats will. I have been informed that there has been quite a change of sentiment against convoys and way among southern members."

NAVY HAULS MEN THROUGH PICKET LINES IN WEST

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22—Under the personal direction of Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, commandant of the 12th Naval District, United States Navy and Maritime Commission trucks today transported AFL ship yard workers through picket lines of striking machinists into the strike-bound Moore Drydock Yards in Oakland.

The trucks, driven by uniformed sailors, transported the workers from the AFL Labor Temple in Oakland into the Moore Yards past several hundred machinists' pickets.

There was no disturbance as the trucks reached the yards. The picket lines parted and the trucks went through.

Prior to the operation, Admiral Greenslade conferred with Fred Barbeau, acting Oakland police captain who, in the absence of Police Chief Bodie Wallman, assigned 100 policemen to the Moore yards today.

Alcatraz Guard Captain Talks Four Desperadoes Out of Trying to Escape

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22—Four of the nation's toughest convicts, all serving life terms, were isolated in dark cells of Alcatraz prison today after literally being "talked out" of a desperate escape attempt by one of four prison officials they had captured.

The convicts held the federal prison mat shop on the northwest tip of Alcatraz Island for two and a half hours with their captives gagged and bound on the floor and eight other non-participating convicts herded into an adjoining room.

But tool-proof steel bars of "the rock" proved too much for them. A stolen motor-driven emery wheel failed to dent the barriers of the mat shop and they were persuaded by Guard Captain Paul Madigan to abandon the attempt.

Warden James A. Johnston identified the men as Joseph Paul Cretzer, 28, and his brother-in-law, Arnold Thomas Kyle, 27, who are serving 25 years for bank robberies on the Pacific Coast and life for the murder of a Tacoma federal marshal during an escape attempt last year; Lloyd H. Barkdoll, Oregon bank robber described by Warden Johnston as the escape plot leader, and Sam R. Shockley, an Oklahoma bank robber and kidnaper.

One by one the quartet overcame and trusted Clyde E. Stoops, guard; C. J. Manning, superintendent of prison industries; Lionel Johnston, yards area officer, and Madigan, captain of the yard.

From 1 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. yesterday Barkdoll and his mates attempted to crack the outside steel bars of a window after smashing the inside detention sash.

BOY, 2, CHOKED PLAYING WITH FAMILY'S PET

Precaution Taken To Test Canine For Rabies Leads To Tragic Accident

PARENTS, SISTER SURVIVE

Funeral To Be Saturday; Coroner Investigates Fatal Mishap

The Laurelville-Adelphi community was saddened today by the tragic accident which caused the death Wednesday afternoon of Gary Lee Harmon, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Harmon of the latter village.

The child had gone to the barn to play with his pet dog, a half-grown puppy, when he was choked to death by a chain to which the dog had been fastened for the last two weeks during an observation period after it had fought with a dog that was suspected of being rabid.

Death of the youngster was caused by strangulation, Coroner R. E. Oliver of Ross County conducting an investigation and returning a verdict of accidental death.

The accident happened about 4:40 p. m. Wednesday.

Relatives and friends of the Harmon family expressed belief that the child, much in love with the puppy, had slipped from the house and had gone to the barn to play with the dog. About 10 minutes later John Strawser, working at the Harmon residence went to the barn and found the boy lying on the barn floor with the dog chain wrapped twice around his neck. The puppy was tugging at the other end.

Carried Into House
The lad was carried to the house where artificial respiration was attempted, but Dr. C. T. Grattidge who was called pronounced the child dead.

Coroner Oliver said that when the leash was shortened by the two turns around the boy's neck the dog apparently tried to pull away tightening the chain and choking the youngster.

The child was born January 31, 1939, and is survived by his parents, a sister, Rita Jean 4, and the grandparents, Ed Strous and Mr. and Mrs. William Harmon, all of the Laurelville community. He was a nephew of Harold Strous, superintendent of the Salt Creek Township school. The child's father operates a meat market in Laurelville.

The funeral will be Saturday at 2:30 p. m. at the Adelphi Methodist Church, the Revs. L. W. Green and R. L. Klausmeier officiating. Burial will be in Adelphi Cemetery by L. E. Hill, Kingston. The body will be at the Harmon residence where friends may call until the hour of the funeral.

80,000. FORD CO. VOTES COUNTED BY NLRB STAFF

DETROIT, May 22—In the presence of company and union officials, tabulators from the National Labor Relations Board went to work today to tally the approximately 80,000 votes cast by Ford Motor Company Rouge and Lincoln plant workers in a collective bargaining election directed by the NLRB.

From 4:30 a. m. yesterday until almost midnight, the workers balloted to determine whether they desire to be represented for collective bargaining purposes by the UAW-CIO, and A. F. L. federal local or no union.

Throughout the long voting period more than 3,000 individual votes were questioned by company, UAW-CIO and A.F.L. challengers stationed at the various voting booths.

The election was staged at a cost of approximately $17,000 and was ordered by the NLRB after both unions laid claim to "substantial membership" within the two plants.

PLANES, TANKS NEEDED BY U. S.

Defense Officials Press For Four Billions To Obtain Supplies

WASHINGTON, May 22—Defense officials are pressing the War Department to seek an additional $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 for planes and tanks over and above the already huge procurement programs for these weapons, congressional sources declared today.

This would mean that the nation's present 36,000-a-year plane goal could be stepped up to around 100,000-a-year and that the output of tanks could be doubled.

While no official estimates have yet been submitted to congress, department officials have told members that this is "in the air."

The plan, if it is carried out, would be to tack the enormous increase onto the regular War Department appropriation bill which is being considered by an appropriation sub-committee.

This bill already totals some $6,500,000,000 and if the proposed plane-tank addition is made it will swell almost to the record high $12,000,000,000 armament bill voted during the World War.

NAVY'S SECRET SERVICE FORCE TO BE BOOSTED

WASHINGTON, May 22—Rep. Vinson (D) Ga., chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, today will seek House approval of his bill strengthening the navy's secret service force.

The measure provides that 350 additional secret agents be placed under a new civilian director and added to the "plant-protection force" in naval yards and other shore stations.

Reporting the administration-backed bill, Rep. Bradley (D) Pa., declared that present marine corps units and secret agents "are considered inadequate and unsuited for the duties contemplated for a plant protection force."

"What is needed is a force of trained men to prevent saboteurs and subversive individuals from injuring government property or government interests," he said.

Vinson said that there were reports that some saboteurs and other persons suspected of subversive activities obtained employment during the drive to speed ship construction.

Spokesmen Deny Action To Be "Preview" of Attack Across Channel

LONDON, May 22—Candia, capital of Crete in the days of its ancient glory, has fallen into German hands but the British navy and air force have turned away a convoy of thirty Nazi transports seeking to land forces sufficient to overwhelm the island, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today.

The prime minister dealt at length for the first time with the "strange and grim battle" now raging in the Mediterranean, in which neither side has an avenue of retreat and the British are fighting against the handicap of having no suitable airbases for bases.

By International News Service
The three-day battle of Crete entered a new phase today as the Germans were reported trying to land light and heavy tanks on the Greek island under cover of incessant aerial attacks.

Thus the Germans disclosed another aspect in the pattern of their "dress rehearsal" for an invasion of Britain—first to establish a bridge-head by air-borne troops, and then land Panzer warriors to complete the conquest.

But Britain said so far the German tactics have failed. Already, the British Broadcasting Corporation said, the Germans are drawing on a "second division" in a desperate attempt to overcome British, Anzac, and Greek resistance on Crete.

Others Ready
Since a German air-borne division is said to number from 7,000 to 12,000 men, it was indicated that from 14,000 to 24,000 Nazi parachute and plane troops have been sent to Crete or are in readiness for the assault.

Germany painted a confident picture of operations in Crete. Fate of the island was described as "already sealed." Nazi troops were said to have gained at least three firm footholds and in the three days of fighting "have never relinquished an inch."

Belief spread in Berlin that the Nazi offensive is a "pre-view" of what Britain faces. But German military spokesmen said "other things will have to be taken care of" before German troops are sent across the English Channel.

BERLIN, May 22—The fate of Crete is "already sealed," unofficial German sources declared today as belief spread in Berlin that the Nazi offensive actually is a full dress rehearsal for invasion of England.

BURBANK, Cal., May 22—Lockheed Aircraft Company officials announced today that by next spring the plant will be rolling 64-passenger transport planes off its production line.

The planes will have four motors and a speed of 350 miles an hour, 100 miles an hour faster than ordinary transports. Super-charged, they will have a cruising altitude of 30,000 feet and will be capable of flying between New York and Los Angeles in less than nine hours.

Alcatraz Guard Captain Talks Four Desperadoes Out of Trying to Escape

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22—Four of the nation's toughest convicts, all serving life terms, were isolated in dark cells of Alcatraz prison today after literally being "talked out" of a desperate escape attempt by one of four prison officials they had captured.

The convicts held the federal prison mat shop on the northwest tip of Alcatraz Island for two and a half hours with their captives gagged and bound on the floor and eight other non-participating convicts herded into an adjoining room.

But tool-proof steel bars of "the rock" proved too much for them. A stolen motor-driven emery wheel failed to dent the barriers of the mat shop and they were persuaded by Guard Captain Paul Madigan to abandon the attempt.

Warden James A. Johnston identified the men as Joseph Paul Cretzer, 28, and his brother-in-law, Arnold Thomas Kyle, 27, who are serving 25 years for bank robberies on the Pacific Coast and life for the murder of a Tacoma federal marshal during an escape attempt last year; Lloyd H. One by one the quartet overcame and trusted Clyde E. Stoops, guard; C. J. Manning, superintendent of prison industries; Lionel Johnston, yards area officer, and Madigan, captain of the yard. From 1 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. yesterday Barkdoll and his mates attempted to crack the outside steel bars of a window after smashing the inside detention sash.

SENIOR YOUTHS ENTERTAINED AT ROTARY MEETING

"Don't cringe when I predict for you a life of trouble," Dr. Herbert Martin, head of the philosophy department of Iowa State University, told 37 Circleville High School senior boys at the Rotary luncheon in the American Hotel Hurricane Thursday noon.

Dr. Martin, speaker at the meeting where the senior boys were guests of the Political Club, contrasted the political, social and economic standards in a democracy with those of an autocracy. "Democracy seeks to serve men, autocracy to enslave men," he declared, as he promised trouble some times for the coming generation, growing out of the present world conflict. He warned the boys against taking the democratic way of life too lightly. "Democracy is a way of life which grew up through the struggle of mankind and unless you appreciate its blessings, and live them, democracy will not succeed at all. It is up to you young men to say whether or not democracy shall prevail."

During the luncheon, the high school quartet, including Charles Mumaw, Glen Cook, Robert Kline and Leland Siegwald, sang several selections. Charles Mumaw sang a bass solo "Bells of the Sea."

Karl Herrmann was in charge of the meeting and introduced the speaker.

Returning to his home in Waverly from Columbus where he had purchased a 1928 Ford coach, Virgil E. Trainer, 18, crashed his car into a telephone pole a mile north of Circleville, on Route 23 Thursday about 9:30 a. m.

The car was completely wrecked, sheriff's officers reported. According to investigating officers, Trainer went to sleep at the wheel and the car left the road on the right side of the highway, traveling 31 yards along the west ditch before striking the telephone pole. Trainer was not injured.

Trainer told sheriff's officers that he intended to sell the car when he got to Waverly.

PLANES, TANKS NEEDED BY U. S.

Defense Officials Press For Four Billions To Obtain Supplies

WASHINGTON, May 22—Defense officials are pressing the War Department to seek an additional $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 for planes and tanks over and above the already huge procurement programs for these weapons, congressional sources declared today.

This would mean that the nation's present 36,000-a-year plane goal could be stepped up to around 100,000-a-year and that the output of tanks could be doubled.

While no official estimates have yet been submitted to congress, department officials have told members that this is "in the air." The plan, if it is carried out, would be to tack the enormous increase onto the regular War Department appropriation bill which is being considered by an appropriation sub-committee.

This bill already totals some $6,500,000,000 and if the proposed plane-tank addition is made it will swell almost to the record high $12,000,000,000 armament bill voted during the World War.

NAVY'S SECRET SERVICE FORCE TO BE BOOSTED

WASHINGTON, May 22—Rep. Vinson (D) Ga., chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, today will seek House approval of his bill strengthening the navy's secret service force.

The measure provides that 350 additional secret agents be placed under a new civilian director and added to the "plant-protection force" in naval yards and other shore stations.

Reporting the administration-backed bill, Rep. Bradley (D) Pa., declared that present marine corps units and secret agents "are considered inadequate and unsuited for the duties contemplated for a plant protection force."

"What is needed is a force of trained men to prevent saboteurs and subversive individuals from injuring government property or government interests," he said. Vinson said that there were reports that some saboteurs and other persons suspected of subversive activities obtained employment during the drive to speed ship construction.

Mrs. Cady will go to Canada with the Mayor.

Spokesmen Deny Action To Be "Preview" of Attack Across Channel

LONDON, May 22—Candia, capital of Crete in the days of its ancient glory, has fallen into German hands but the British navy and air force have turned away a convoy of thirty Nazi transports seeking to land forces sufficient to overwhelm the island, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today.

The prime minister dealt at length for the first time with the "strange and grim battle" now raging in the Mediterranean, in which neither side has an avenue of retreat and the British are fighting against the handicap of having no suitable airdromes for bases.

By International News Service The three-day battle of Crete entered a new phase today as the Germans were reported trying to land light and heavy tanks on the Greek island under cover of incessant aerial attacks.

Thus the Germans disclosed another aspect in the pattern of their "dress rehearsal" for an invasion of Britain—first to establish a bridge-head by air-borne troops, and then land Panzer warriors to complete the conquest.

But Britain said so far the German tactics have failed. Already, the British Broadcasting Corporation said, the Germans are drawing on a "second division" in a desperate attempt to overcome British, Anzac, and Greek resistance on Crete.

Others Ready Since a German air-borne division is said to number from 7,000 to 12,000 men, it was indicated that from 14,000 to 24,000 Nazi parachute and plane troops have been sent to Crete or are in readiness for the assault.

Germany painted a confident picture of operations in Crete. Fate of the island was described as "already sealed." Nazi troops were said to have gained at least three firm footholds and in the three days of fighting "have never relinquished an inch."

Belief spread in Berlin that the Nazi offensive is a "preview" of what Britain faces. But German military spokesmen said "other things will have to be taken care of" before German troops are sent across the English Channel.

BERLIN, May 22—The fate of Crete is "already sealed," unofficial German sources declared today as belief spread in Berlin that the Nazi offensive actually is a full dress rehearsal for invasion of England.

Military spokesmen said that "other things will have to be taken care of" before the Nazi invasion.

FLYING EXPERTS WORKING ON BIG TRANSPORT SHIP

BURBANK, Cal., May 22—Lockheed Aircraft Company officials announced today that by next spring the plant will be rolling 64-passenger transport planes off its production line.

Development of the huge new transport has been going on secretly the last two years, and the principal designers and planners were Jack Frye, president of TWA, and Howard Hughes, millionaire sportsman and noted aviator.

The planes will have four motors and a speed of 350 miles an hour, 100 miles an hour faster than ordinary transports. Supercharged, they will have a cruising altitude of 30,000 feet and will be capable of flying between New York and Los Angeles in less than nine hours.

COUNCIL NEEDS MORE CASH FOR POLICE FORCE

Circleville To Be Forced To Add Three Men Under New Legislation

3-MILL LEVY DISCUSSED

Special Meeting Next Week To Give Consideration To Question

Faced with increasing financial difficulties, City Council will consider placing a three-mill operating levy before Circleville voters in the August primary. A special session will be held next Wednesday night to study the question.

Council decided to consider the three-mill levy as a means of raising revenue after Mayor W. B. Cady informed council members that by July 31, the police department would have to add three more men to its personnel if it is to continue with 24-hour a day law enforcement. Under state law passed at the last session of the legislature, city police may work no more than eight hours in any 24. If council fails to add additional men to the force, the city will have to go without police protection at least part of the time, the Mayor pointed out.

Councilman W. M. Reid moved that the three-mill levy question be referred to the finance committee. The motion was seconded by Councilman George Crites and passed.

A three-mill levy was presented to Circleville voters at the November 5th election last fall, and fell 72 votes short of reaching the 65 percent vote needed for passage. The vote was 2,385 for and 1,395 against. The levy is designed to raise enough money from real estate taxation to permit the city to operate during the current year.

Also to be considered at next Wednesday's special session is $2,000 bond issue to raise money to pay for the county garage building on East Ohio Street, recently purchased for $800 from the county commissioners. Of the $2,000, $1,300 is to be used for the purchase of real estate on which the building stands and $700 for additional construction and improvement of the building. When the structure has been repaired, it is to be occupied by the service department. Specifications for the bond issue will be considered at next Wednesday's meeting.

KILLER OF CARL HOOVER TO USE INSANITY PLEA

Wayne Thompson, 23, of Columbus, who shot and killed Carl Hoover, Columbus grocer, during a holdup attempt, will base his defense on an insanity plea, it was indicated Thursday in Franklin County courts.

Thompson, the day of the crime, said he was born in Circleville, while Hoover, son of the former Cora Leist of Circleville, had many aunts, uncles and cousins in the Circleville area.

According to an affidavit filed by Thompson's attorney with the Franklin County Common Pleas Court, the youth's family believes him mentally irresponsible. If the jurist finds him sane, the trial will open as scheduled Monday, with the question becoming one for the jury to decide.

Thompson was charged with first degree murder after he shot Hoover to death for resisting an attempted holdup.

MANY AMERICAN FIRMS SELLING GOODS TO AXIS?

Senate Gillette Demands Speedy Investigation By Congress

PETROLEUM CASE CITED

Metals Being Shipped To Russia and Then Into German Ports

WASHINGTON, May 22 — Asserting that he has received "numerous reports" of American and British firms furnishing war materials to the axis powers, Sen. Gillette (D) Iowa, today urged speedy approval of his resolution for a congressional investigation.

"This is a very vital subject to the defense effort of this country," Gillette, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said. "I have numerous reports where American and British companies are furnishing the axis powers with war materials. Such information warrants an inquiry by congress in the interest of our defense effort."

Gillette's resolution, reported favorably by the Senate Commerce Committee, would authorize the expenditure of $20,000 for the investigation by a joint senate and house committee of five members each.

He said that the "most flagrant" example of war materials being sent to the axis powers is occurring in the sale of petroleum to Japan and Russia which is later shipped to Germany.

Petroleum Contracted

Gillette said he has been informed that British and American companies have recently contracted to refine a large quantity of petroleum from the Dutch East Indies for Japan.

"There are heavy movements of petroleum from our Pacific ports to Japan," he added. "It seems to me that the American people, making the defense effort that they are, are entitled to know about these activities that could contribute to the defeat of our purpose."

"The American people," he continued, "are entitled to know to what extent British and American firms are contributing to the axis war effort."

Gillette charged that there are "many instances" of shipment of metals to Russia which are then trans-shipped to Germany.

"Another source of German supply of metals is by routing them through the Soviet Republic," he said.

Senate and house administration leaders indicated that they would support Gillette's resolution. It was indicated also that the Justice Department is prepared to furnish the committee with "valuable" material if the investigation is approved.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

MANY AMERICAN FIRMS SELLING GOODS TO AXIS?

Senate Gillette Demands Speedy Investigation By Congress

PETROLEUM CASE CITED

Metals Being Shipped To Russia and Then Into German Ports

WASHINGTON, May 22 — Asserting that he has received "numerous reports" of American and British firms furnishing war materials to the axis powers, Sen. Gillette (D) Iowa, today urged speedy approval of his resolution for a congressional investigation.

"This is a very vital subject to the defense effort of this country," Gillette, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said. "I have numerous reports where American and British companies are furnishing the axis powers with war materials. Such information warrants an inquiry by congress in the interest of our defense effort."

Gillette's resolution, reported favorably by the Senate Commerce Committee, would authorize the expenditure of $20,000 for the investigation by a joint senate and house committee of five members each.

He said that the "most flagrant" example of war materials being sent to the axis powers is occurring in the sale of petroleum to Japan and Russia which is later shipped to Germany.

Petroleum Contracted

Gillette said he has been informed that British and American companies have recently contracted to refine a large quantity of petroleum from the Dutch East Indies for Japan.

"There are heavy movements of petroleum from our Pacific ports to Japan," he added. "It seems to me that the American people, making the defense effort that they are, are entitled to know about these activities that could contribute to the defeat of our purpose."

"The American people," he continued, "are entitled to know to what extent British and American firms are contributing to the axis war effort."

Gillette charged that there are "many instances" of shipment of metals to Russia which are then trans-shipped to Germany.

"Another source of German supply of metals is by routing them through the Soviet Republic," he said.

Senate and house administration leaders indicated that they would support Gillette's resolution. It was indicated also that the Justice Department is prepared to furnish the committee with "valuable" material if the investigation is approved.

BRITAIN CLAIMS REICH'S TACTICS NOT SUCCESSFUL

Berlin Declares Island's "Fate Sealed"; Three Footholds Taken

Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen admitted that heavy fighting has been under way for three days in Crete. But they insisted that German parachute and airplane troops, reinforced by naval units and backed by an incessant "blitz" by the Luftwaffe, had gained a firm foothold the very first day of hostilities "and have never relinquished an inch."

Officially, the German high command remained silent. The German public has not yet been told even that Crete was attacked. A "surprise announcement"—meaning of course another Nazi victory—was discussed in competent quarters.

Valuable Positions Gained According to information made available to correspondents, the attacking German forces have obtained suitable air field space, access to the sea and advantageous "attack" positions against the British and Greeks in Crete.

Military men cited the terrific German air attack on a British naval unit off Crete yesterday as proof of Britain's inability to land suitable reinforcements. Bomb hits on eight British warships were claimed.

LONDON, May 22—An attempt by German forces to land light and heavy tanks on the embattled island of Crete from ships operating under cover of Stuka dive-bombers was reported in London today.

At the same time, the British Broadcasting Company, in a special short-wave message to foreign countries, said that the Germans already were drawing on a "second division" in a desperate attempt to overcome the determined resistance of British and Greek forces on the Mediterranean Island.

These new developments followed failure of a new Nazi ruse designed to speed conquest of the strategic Mediterranean base. Pickup Second Para XXX Reports etc.

Reports reaching London said scores of Stukas, in a bold attempt to cover landings of still more air-borne troops, poured smoke bombs on defensive positions in an effort to "blind" the defenders.

But the prevailing Mediterranean wind blew the smoke away before it could serve its purpose and the new German ruse accomplished nothing.

Meanwhile, British and Greek naval units leaped into action as the British and Greek forces battled unceasingly against the Nazi attackers. Military authorities in London said they had taken a "heavy toll" of the Nazis.

The strength of the Anglo-Greek land defense was believed responsible for the terrific new German aerial bombardment.

In this connection the Times of London warned in an editorial that the assistance that British fighting planes will be able to give the defenders of Crete may not prove very strong.

London Pessimistic This, coupled with reports that the earlier Luftwaffe bombardments wrought havoc among Crete's defenses and airmen, resulted in a somewhat pessimistic view of the situation in London.

The Times editorial pointed out that the defenders cannot succeed without a victory over the Germans in the air.

On another potential "front," it was reported, official German military, naval, economic and industrial commissions have been flooding into Spanish Morocco. Increasing infiltration of German "tourists" has been reported in this same area during the last few weeks.

These "tourists" now are said to be reporting to German military commanders in Morocco, leading to belief in London that the Nazis are preparing for action in the western Mediterranean.

Official British quarters said this afternoon that German forces were "still attempting to invade Crete," but insisted that the defenders were "accounting for" a heavy percentage of the invaders.

Authoritative British quarters declared there were no official indications that the Germans had gained a foothold anywhere in Crete, but they said fighting was continuing.

The London Daily Mirror said the German sea invasion of the strategic Mediterranean island had been "effectively crushed."

Simultaneously reports reached London hinting that the Nazi offensive against Crete may develop into a Mediterranean campaign on a still wider scale.

Troops Near Gibraltar A Tanger dispatch to the London News Chronicle stated that "intense" troop movements were continuing inside Spanish Morocco, opposite the British stronghold of Gibraltar.

This same dispatch said French convoys were passing Tangier to the east and west almost daily, escorted by French warships.

The British warships, supported by Greek naval units, were said to have burst into action off Crete early today turning their heavy guns against Nazi parachute troops, glider troops and ships which were attempting to land tanks and other supplies for the invading German forces.

In London authoritative military circles said they had received no precise details as yet of reported landings of German sea-borne troops at Crete, but all reports indicated such landings had been attempted.

It was believed, however, that these Nazi tactics had met with little or no success in the face of withering fire from the defense forces.

Major Gen. B. C. Freyburg, commander of the British forces at Crete, last night sent a message to military authorities at Cairo stating:

"It has been a hard day. Our troops are fighting superbly."

Latest reports in London said that German troops were understood to have attempted landings on Crete from small boats but that these attempts were repulsed. British, New Zealand and Greek forces were reported "still rounding up" Germans who landed from the air.

SOBER STATESMEN

Old men for counsel; young men for war. Herbert Hoover, America's elder statesman, last week made the most impressive speech of his career.

The whirling dervishes have had their say. The Peppers and Lees have hurled their adjectives into space. Now a decision must be made. War or Peace for America.

If there is a free man left in this country, Mr. Hoover deserves that distinction. He made no commitments to the American people last fall. He has since made no contradictory commitments to foreign peoples. He is under no political pressure to "go down the line." He is wed to no "war bride." His abhorrence of Hitlerism is known.

Many have become so emotional that they throw the thermometer on the floor. They would exercise evil from the world by cures and incantations.

But the solemn prospect of a ten years war, the blockade of a continent, the starvation of millions abroad, the bankruptcy of millions at home, and the end of freedom for a generation call for something beside braggadocio.

What is our interest in this matter? Like two overlapping circles there are some points we have in common and some in which we have no interest. One point in common is Canada. Another is that England stands, her fleet in her hands. But is it our business to maintain the balance of power in Europe? Or India? Or to establish the "four freedoms" everywhere, for everybody, now, by blood and iron?

"British policy is very simple. It is to always support the second strongest power on the continent". So said Winston Churchill, only three years ago. In short it is to balance off the strongest. Divide and rule. For that policy England has fought for three centuries. She has used Prussians to defeat Napoleon; Frenchmen to defeat Prussians. It is to keep Europe fragmented. The same policy caused her in 1861 to throw her weight in the South to fragment the United States. Lord Palmerston put it this way—"Britain has no eternal enemies; no eternal friendships; only eternal interests."

But there are sober statesmen in Britain as well as in America, who are unwilling to pursue this course. The late Lord Lothian, before he became ambassador, said in 1937:

"If the theory of collective security got us into another European war, what would we be fighting for? We would be fighting to maintain the anarchy of Europe, which is Europe's fundamental cause. I do not think that is a cause which is worth 1,000,000 British lives."

"In great measure Fascism was rebellion against the discrimination of the Treaty of Versailles and the economic barriers which since the War had shut all nations, except Russia, the United States and ourselves, who had immense areas under our control, from the markets of the rest of the world and especially from colonial markets."

"The difficulties of Europe are far greater today than they were in 1914. Then there were seventeen sovereign States, now there are twenty-six, and I do not think in considering the problem of Europe you should ever lose sight of the fact that anarchy lies at the root of its troubles."

And Lord Halifax, the present ambassador, in October 1938, said, "A living and changing world can never be held in iron clamps and any such attempt is the highroad to disaster."

We can join this war to keep the world in "iron clamps" and "maintain anarchy in Europe". We can wage Punie war to establish Communism throughout Europe, and probably in America. On the other hand we can try for peace. Let us do everything we can to stay at peace instead of everything we can to go to war.

Wire worms are a particular menace to the vegetable garden since they are difficult insects to control.

Plants which have been attacked by wire worms have a dejected appearance. They are wilted, yellowish in color or stunted; when such plants are dug up, it will be found that the wire worms have eaten practically all the roots from each plant.

THE WIRE WORM FEEDS ON TENDER ROOTS OF PLANTS ABOUT TWICE ACTUAL SIZE

Keep watch for the wire worm

Shown in the Garden-Graph is a picture of the wire worm, about twice life size. The worm is the larva of the click beetle. The worm is one and one-half inches long, slim, and either orange-brown or yellow in color. As these worms live to the age of five years, they provide a perennial problem for the gardener.

Wire worms can be trapped by appealing to their greediness: Place one-inch-square pieces of carrot two inches deep in the soil, a foot apart. Have the pieces of carrot spitted with a small stick so they can easily be pulled up. The wire worms which will be found clinging to the pieces of carrot can then be dropped into a can. Pieces of potato buried in the soil will also trap the wire worms in similar fashion.

MERCURY SOARS, MAY GO ABOVE WEDNESDAY'S 90

Circleville mopped its brow Thursday and watched the mercury climb up the scale and threaten to top the season's high, set Wednesday at 90 degrees.

Wednesday's high was four degrees above the previous high of 86. The barometer Thursday was rising slightly, Weatherman Ervin Leist, said, which indicates fair weather ahead.

The weather has kept farmers busy in their corn fields, although many report that the ground is drying out rapidly and another rain would benefit growing crops.

FINDS 60 POUND BEAVER

WARRENSBURG, N. Y. — A 60-pound beaver, one of the largest ever seen in this section, was found by Royce Hill Chestertown on his way to work. The animal had evidently been sideswiped by a passing car as it seemed dazed and Hill had no trouble loading it into the trunk of his car. Game Protector Murray Cannel found no scars on the animal. He said it was one of the finest pelts he had even seen and the fur alone would be worth about $75. The beaver was released in the swamps north of here, where there are several large colonies of beaver.

BRITAIN CLAIMS REICH'S TACTICS NOT SUCCESSFUL

Berlin Declares Island's "Fate Sealed"; Three Footholds Taken

Wilhelmstrasse spokesmen admitted that heavy fighting has been under way for three days in Crete. But they insisted that German parachute and airplane troops, reinforced by naval units and "backed by the Luftwaffe, had gained a firm foothold the very first day of hostilities and have never relinquished an inch."

Officially, the German high command remained silent. The German public has not yet been told even that Crete was attacked. A "surprise announcement"—meaning of course another Nazi victory—was discussed in competent quarters.

Valuable Positions Gained

According to information made available to correspondents, the attacking German forces have obtained suitable air field space, access to the sea and advantageous "attack" positions against the British and Greeks in Crete.

Military men cited the terrific German air attack on a British naval unit off Crete yesterday as proof of Britain's inability to land suitable reinforcements. Bomb hits on eight British warships were claimed.

LONDON, May 22—An attempt by German forces to land light and heavy tanks on the embattled island of Crete from ships operating under cover of Stuka dive-bombers was reported in London today.

At the same time, the British Broadcasting Company, in a special short-wave message to foreign countries, said that the Germans already were drawing on a "second division" in a desperate attempt to overcome the determined resistance of British and Greek forces on the Mediterranean island.

These new developments followed failure of a new Nazi ruse designed to speed conquest of the strategic Mediterranean base. Pickup Second Para XXX Reports etc.

Reports reaching London said scores of Stukas, in a bold attempt to cover landings of still more air-borne troops, poured smoke bombs on defensive positions in an effort to "blind" the defenders.

But the prevailing Mediterranean wind blew the smoke away before it could serve its purpose and the new German ruse accomplished nothing.

Meanwhile, British and Greek naval units leaped into action as the British and Greek forces battled unceasingly against the Nazi attackers. Military authorities in London said they had taken a "heavy toll" of the Nazis.

The strength of the Anglo-Greek land defense was believed responsible for the terrific new German aerial bombardment.

In this connection the Times of London warned in an editorial that the assistance that British fighting planes will be able to give the defenders of Crete may not prove very strong.

London Pessimistic This, coupled with reports that the earlier Luftwaffe bombardments wrought havoc among Crete's defenses and airmen, resulted in a somewhat pessimistic view of the situation in London.

The Times editorial pointed out that the defenders cannot succeed without a victory over the Germans in the air.

On another potential "front," it was reported, official German military, naval, economic and industrial commissions have been flooding into Spanish Morocco. Increasing infiltration of German "tourists" has been reported in this same area during the last few weeks.

These "tourists" now are said to be reporting to German military commanders in Morocco, leading to belief in London that the Nazis are preparing for action in the western Mediterranean.

Official British quarters said this afternoon that German forces were "still attempting to invade Crete," but insisted that the defenders were "accounting for" a heavy percentage of the invaders.

Authoritative British quarters declared there were no official indications that the Germans had gained a foothold anywhere in Crete, but they said fighting was continuing.

The London Daily Mirror said the German sea invasion of the strategic Mediterranean island had been "effectively crushed."

Simultaneously reports reached London hinting that the Nazi offensive against Crete may develop into a Mediterranean campaign on a still wider scale.

This same dispatch said French convoys were passing Tangier to the east and west almost daily, escorted by French warships.

The British warships, supported by Greek naval units, were said to have burst into action off Crete early today turning their heavy guns against Nazi parachute troops, glider troops and ships which were attempting to land tanks and other supplies for the invading German forces.

In London authoritative military circles said they had received no precise details as yet of reported landings of German sea-borne troops at Crete, but all reports indicated such landings had been attempted.

It was believed, however, that these Nazi tactics had met with little or no success in the face of "withering fire from the defense forces."

Major Gen. B. C. Freyburg, commander of the British forces at Crete, last night sent a message to military authorities at Cairo stating:

"It has been a hard day. Our troops are fighting superbly."

Latest reports in London said that German troops were understood to have attempted landings on Crete from small boats but that these attempts were repulsed.

British, New Zealand and Greek forces were reported "still rounding up" Germans who landed from the air.

The London Daily Mirror said the German sea invasion of the strategic Mediterranean island had been "effectively crushed."

SOBER STATESMEN

Old men for counsel; young men for war. Herbert Hoover, America's elder statesman, last week made the most impressive speech of his career.

The whirling dervishes have had their say. The Peppers and Lees have hurled their adjectives into space. Now a decision must be made. War or Peace for America.

If there is a free man left in this country, Mr. Hoover deserves that distinction. He made no commitments to the American people last fall. He has since made no contradictory commitments to foreign peoples. He is under no political pressure to "go down the line." He is wed to no "war bride." His abhorrence of Hitlerism is known.

Many have become so emotional that they throw the thermometer on the floor. They would exercise evil from the world by curses and incantations.

But the solemn prospect of a ten years war, the blockade of a continent, the starvation of millions abroad, the bankruptcy of millions at home, and the end of freedom for a generation call for something beside braggadocio.

Van Patten will be at the local draft office in the Court House Monday afternoon at 2 p. m. to accept applications.

Qualifications call for young men between the ages of 21 and 35, 18 to 35 with parents' consent. Applicants must have at least an eighth grade education. Positions are open in fields of mechanics, meteorology, photography, electricity and other fields connected with aviation. Young men must enroll for a period of three years and pass the regular physical requirements of Class 1-A men. After they have enlisted, those who show an interest in a particular field are sent to technical schools for six to nine months' training.

Patterson Field needs about 400 more men to fill its quota, Lieut. Van Patten said. Transfer of some of the men to other stations and some to training schools has necessitated further enlistments, he said.

At present there are ten squadrons at Patterson Field.

SEEDS AUTO HIT; DRIVER INJURED; DOCTOR UNHURT

By S. D. Fridley Phone, Ashville 79

While Warren Seeds, accompanied by Doctor Gardner, was driving his auto in South Columbus Tuesday evening his machine was struck from the rear by a high speed driver, shunting the Seeds auto across the street. Both autos were considerably damaged. Mr. Seeds received a couple of cracked ribs and is all bandaged up as a result. Doctor Gardner escaped without injury. It will be recalled that the doctor was in an upset on the Lockbourne road some few weeks ago and received a broken left arm and which has just now been turned loose from its bandages.

Ashville: Mr. Gable, new president of the Community Club, told us there will be a meeting of the Club at the Mrs. Pontius restaurant next Monday evening at 6:30 o'clock. Eats, of course.

Ashville: Kenneth Holtrey, Walnut School Agriculture teacher and in a Columbus hospital for several days recovering from an operation, was brought by Schlegel ambulance to his home here Wednesday.

Ashville: The A. B. Cooper 4000-gallon gas tank is hovering over, since yesterday, that big Dobby hotel hole in the ground and today was lowered by tackle into its resting place. And a lot of us bosses are seeing to it that all is done right.

Ashville: "Bill" Brobeck, 85 years now soon, July 16, to be exact, walked down town from his home yesterday and stood the trip fine. No other person here, that we have in mind, knows as much about early Ashville as Mr. Brobeck. Edward Dewey and Ward B. Powell are next in line, we'd say. Will be making a list of them all. Not more than a dozen, at a guess.

Ashville: The forty fifth annual commencement of Ashville High School was held in the auditorium Tuesday evening, May 20 for 26 graduates as follows: Jessie Baum, Doris Cline, Bill Cloud, Donna Courtwright, William Darrow, George Forquer, Marilyn Hedges, Charles Hoover, Francis Huber, Edna Hunt, Orlan Hines, Ray Kraft, Garnet McClurg, Maurice Murray, Paul Neff, Ethel Reid, Ruth Rinehart, Clarence Rush Jr., Ruth Ann Sark, Esther Smith, Irene Smith, Bill Schiarp, Jane Stevenson, Ralph Swayer, Warren Swisher and Warren White.

20,000 PETITIONERS ASK LaGUARDIA TO RUN AGAIN

NEW YORK, May 22—Petitions bearing 20,000 signatures and urging that he seek re-election, were brought to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's office today in the wake of the mayor's announcement that he would run for a third term if the people wanted him.

In a radio address to the people of the City of New York, LaGuardia said there was no conflict between his new duties as director of the office of civilian defense and his obligations as mayor. On the contrary, he said, the two functions merged, because New York City was the logical target for a foreign enemy.

County Agent Discusses Control Of Crop Pests

With early season insects now attacking growing crops, County Agent F. K. Blair lists measures which farmers and vegetable growers may take to control and avoid some of them.

Farmers in varied sections of the county are reporting cutworms in their fields and truck patches. Poisoned bran mash bait is the most dependable way to deal with sudden outbreaks of cutworms. The bait is made by mixing five pounds of wheat bran and ¼ pound of Paris green. Over this pour sweetened water by stirring 1 pint of syrup in three quarts of water. Mix well until the bran is uniformly moist, but not soggy. The addition of fruit juice is not necessary for cutworm control. Cutworms feed at night, so apply the bait in the late afternoon or evening. Scatter it lightly near the row or plants to be protected. If scattered properly, poultry will not pick it up.

Few wireworms also are reported in the county. There is no good control known for wireworms. Rotations to avoid timothy or grass, preceding potatoes, beans or cabbage guarantee the least loss.

White grubs are among the chief offenders to vegetables. Control consists in selecting crop rotation to avoid them. Soil now known to be infested should not be planted to row or hill crops. Where strawberries are to be planted, they should be planted in the fall.

planted in grub-infested soil, it is possible to protect the little plants for two years by poisoning the soil around the roots of the plants with lead arsenate. This may be done by thoroughly mixing one part of lead arsenate with 20 parts of previously dried soil, or sand, then place a handful of this mixture in the hole where each new plant is to be set. A box or pail of the treated soil may be hauled along when setting out the plants. Treating after the plants are set out is not advised.

AAA OFFICIALS PLAN ELECTION

Wheat Marketing Quotas To Be Decided May 31; Vote
Like Other Ballots

County AAA officials and community committeemen Thursday were setting up election machinery necessary for conducting the wheat marketing quota election on May 31.

During the all-day meeting at Betz Restaurant, an election committee will be appointed and election stations in the various townships will be established.

According to county AAA officials the vote will be conducted like any other election, with each wheat grower given a ballot on which he may vote either for or against marketing quotas.

County AAA officials returned Wednesday from a district meeting in Lancaster, where they were

OUR ATLANTIC JOB

AS for Dakar, which some Americans seem to think we ought to seize and hold, it is probably fair to say that, from where most of us stand, that doesn't seem to be our job. Not now, anyway. While acknowledging that, in our spreading effort to preserve freedom in the world, we are bound to cooperate with our British allies and to defend South America, we don't feel an imperative urge to move into Africa.

We do appreciate the menace which that western point may offer to South America, in which we are greatly interested, and which we want to preserve from Old World domination. But isn't it a natural job for the British themselves, who are primarily an Eastern Hemisphere power as we are primarily a Western Hemisphere power?

By the same token, when it seems necessary for the free powers in the Battle of the Atlantic to move into those Atlantic islands, the Azores, Madeiras, Canaries and Cape Verde, isn't that also rather a natural job for Britain? They are all in the eastern Atlantic. If Britain can attend to those chores, we can easily take care of outposts in the western Atlantic, which is our proper sphere.

OUTDOOR COOKING

PERHAPS it is impossible to eat one's cake and have it, too, but the great American public seems to be doing it in one field. It is enjoying all the comforts and conveniences of the modern home in air conditioning, improved stoves and refrigerators, and so on. And at the same time it is going back, voluntarily and with considerable relish, to certain inconveniences of pioneer life.

Most conspicuous of these revivals is the outdoor cooking that is now "all the rage" throughout the United States. Whether the back-to-pioneering family or group cooks over a camp fire rigged up temporarily with stones on which balance coffee pot and skillet, or whether it uses little charcoal grills in public parks, or has a fine home-made fireplace in its own backyard, the urge and practice are the same.

The small fry love it. Bacon and eggs, or wieners, or hamburgers, or steaks seem to them much better when mingled with a little confusion, smoke and ashes out of doors. The smoke and ashes, as a matter of fact, are often eliminated in these new-fangled pioneering arrangements. Now and then some really de luxe outfit includes an electrically-driven spit on which the men of the family roast a leg of lamb or a fine chunk of beef. And they're not driven to it by the women, either.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

A CONTROVERSY'S on at the war department over the best type and caliber of holster gun to provide our army officers with. The doughboys ordinarily don't carry that sort of weapon. Their shooting's done from the shoulder. Officers, however, usually tote a side arm. Occasionally, in a trench fight, for instance, it's useful. Naval officers' requirements don't matter so much. They do their scrapping at long range, from turrets, with cannon. An aviator, though, forced to land, and particularly a parachutist, deliberately dropped overboard into enemy territory, may find a pistol extremely handy.

One school of thought favors an old-fashioned revolver. Another school's for the up-to-date automatic.

Then there's the question of caliber. Some military men want .45's, the biggest bore in creation. Others argue that .38's are just as effective, more manageable and lighter to transport, dangling on the hip, conveniently.

The war department ought to consult an expert. For years my father was a firearms salesman. A man of peace, he never shot anybody, but he understood all sorts of guns' peculiarities and possibilities. With him as an instructor I practically cut my teeth on the barrel of a six-shooter. Oke, if I can get the department to listen to me, an old-time revolver is more dependable than an automatic. Parenthetically I may say that newspaper references to an "automatic revolver" make me tired. In a certain sense a revolver is automatic, in that its cylinder automatically revolves when the hammer's lifted. But when a news writer speaks of an automatic revolver that isn't what he means; he means a new-fangled automatic. When it's fired, the recoil automatically ejects the empty shell and lifts another cartridge out of a clip in the butt into barrel. No revolution is involved in the transaction. An automatic is an automatic pistol but it isn't a revolver. A revolver is a revolving pistol.

REVOLVER MORE RELIABLE
Well, an automatic's mechanism, being more complicated than a revolver's, is more liable than a revolver's to get out of order—to jam at an inopportune moment, perhaps very embarrassing. We arrive now at the question of caliber. When a guy is coming at you with murder in his eye, your first essential is to knock him cold. To accomplish that, you need impact and you get a maximum of it out of a .45, as the largest slug manufactured.

A .38 is substantial but a .45 is more so. For that matter, a .32 will perforate a man. Even a little peewee of a .22 will send a steel-jacketed ball through him and maybe puncture two or three other fellows to the rearward of him. And if the teeny-weeny little steel-jacketed pill tracks through a vital spot, the bird will die subsequently—but, before he does so, there may be an interval, during which he'll keep on coming, get to you, and, as his last act, raise Hades with some of your own vital organs.

No, what you want isn't so much penetration as impact, and bulk is what provides the latter. To run impact up to the n'th power a soft-nosed (not a steel-jacketed) .45 slug is ideal. That article, fired at short range (it won't carry far), hitting the critter, will mushroom, spread pretty much over the whole side of his face, and flatten him instantly. Then, having him down and out, if you feel like it you can kill him at your leisure.

HITLER'S ENCIRCLEMENT

WASHINGTON—It takes no profound expert on international relations to see cogent parallels between the position of this country today and that of certain European countries yesterday.

For instance: Five years ago this column gave the inside story of the French dilemma on March 7, 1936—the date Hitler sent his troops into the demilitarized Rhineland. All that fateful day, the French Cabinet deliberated. Whether to send the French army into the Rhineland to stop Hitler's very small, very inexperienced, young army was the question.

Chief of Staff Gamelin notified the Cabinet that to oppose Hitler might actually mean war, but it meant the risk of war. Hitler's new young army might fold up and retreat. But if it took a stand, it meant war.

The Cabinet debated this all day long. Finally it decided that the country could not risk war. The political reaction would be bad. Also the defense program was not complete.

Later it was disclosed that Hitler had given his troop commanders double marching orders. One order was to advance. The other order was to retreat in case of French resistance.

NOTE—One year later, when Hitler took Austria, France was better prepared. But Germany was even more so. And far more important, Germany now had protected her great industrial area of the Ruhr and moved into the strategic Rhine Valley, for which an attack on either France or Germany is absolutely essential.

USA AND WEST AFRICA

On Thursday, May 15, 1941, it became known that France had signed a deal whereby her colonies in West Africa (and elsewhere) were turned over to Hitler's uses.

On Friday, May 16, 1941, the White House and the State Department debated all day whether President Roosevelt should send a message to Congress warning the nation what German troops and bombing planes at Dakar, on the western bulge of Africa, meant to the Monroe Doctrine.

The day passed and nothing happened. But previously many other precious days had passed.

Last autumn, after the capitulation of France, General Weygand had an army of 300,000 men in North Africa, plus a fair number of airplanes and artillery. At that time Admiral Leahy, new Ambassador to France, suggested a joint Pan-American naval expedition to Dakar, jumping-off place to South America, to prevent such a jump-off.

At that time General Weygand's army, cooperating with the British in Egypt, could have applied the pincers on the Italians, squeezed them out of Libya in no time.

But Admiral Leahy's suggestion was not seriously considered. Political sentiment in the United States, he was told, never would stand for it, and besides the United States was not prepared.

Today, the German-Italian armistice commission has dismantled all of General Weygand's airplanes, blown up his forts, disarmed his men, taken away his artillery. And what is left of the French army in North Africa, tired of waiting for the United States and Britain, has thrown in its lot with Hitler.

Arthritis Is Puzzling

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● All too frequently we hear arthritis spoken of as if it were a single disease entity with a single cause which responded to a single form of treatment. I recently saw a clinic which dispelled this idea entirely. The object of the

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

clinician was to puzzle the medical students so that they would analyze cases of arthritis carefully and classify them so that they could be individually treated.

The first case was a middle-aged man who had an enlarged knee which he said "slipped on him." He could bend it backwards so that it looked like the last part of parenthesis. The doctor could take a leg forward and twist the knee from side to side beyond the limit of ordinary motion. There was no inflammation as is implied in the word arthritis, but there was a lack of nutrition, and the case simply was an example of a joint that had atrophied on account of disease of the nerves which went to it. The man in fact had locomotor ataxia.

Tubercular Joint

The next patient was an example of tuberculosis of the joint. The treatment here was obviously not only the treatment of the joint, but the general treatment of the nutritive condition. Then there came a patient with a bowed and stiff back, who had been treated for "arthritis" of the spine for years. She had in fact, a disorder of the ductless glands, acromegaly, which frequently leads to overgrowth of the bone end.

The next patient was quite a puzzle; a young man who had an enlarged knee joint which had come on quite suddenly. It showed no change in the bone whatever, but there was a doughy infiltration around the joint. It was an example of the rare blood disease, hemophilia. The patient had a history of having bled several weeks from the extraction of a tooth, and of one occasion when there was a prolonged bleeding from an inconsequential cut on the finger. But it is a fact that most of these patients present themselves as cases of arthritis because they have hemorrhage into the joints.

Disabled by Carelessness

I had a patient once who was an example of this in a butcher boy who drove a delivery wagon, and used to delight in showing off by jumping down from the seat under the shaft and then swinging with his other leg to the ground. The jolts caused hemorrhage into the joints, which gave him a great deal of permanent disability. If he had only known the nature of the disease which he had, he could have prevented himself from a lifelong crippling.

Thus we see from consideration of these cases that arthritis is not a simple thing, and dogmatic pronouncements on how to treat it are likely to be dangerous.

Answer—Grape juice, if it is not fermented, does not bring on hardening of the liver, nor does boiled cereal.

BETSY SLID into Tom's arms and was a little surprised that being there should be so very pleasant. There was a marvelous sense of rightness about being there; their steps matched perfectly and the music seemed to lift them up. "So that's the Big Moment," said Tom dryly.

Betsy set her teeth hard and after a moment she said through them, "If you try to be funny—I'll scream—"

"What do you mean, try?" demanded Tom. "I can be funny about a lug like that without half trying."

Betsy stared up at him. Why, Tom was jealous! How perfectly swell! She all but beamed at him, and Tom, looking down at her said curiously, "Well, what are you looking so smug about?"

Betsy tucked her flushing face once more against his shoulder and said politely, "Nothing—just nothing at all."

Tom looked at her sternly, but before he could pursue the subject any farther the music stopped and the crowd went back to its various tables.

Natalie gave the signal that separated the groups once more, and her own crowd tramped back to the hotel.

In her own room Betsy stood beside the open window, looking out into the soft, velvet beauty of the tropical night. There was a strange new excitement drumming in her veins. She felt an odd lightness, a sensation as though she had been running very fast and as though it would be no trouble at all to fly! And that was pretty crazy, because absolutely nothing had happened except that she had casually bumped into a man she had once known. Fantastic to realize that she had thought herself in love with him; incredible that she had cried herself to sleep because he was so far out of her reach; impossible that she should have burned with jealousy and despair when she had heard the tone of his voice as he spoke to his wife on the telephone. And yet—it was all true!

Once she had thought that her life was doomed to loneliness and bitterness because Dirk Maynard was out of her reach. She laughed aloud at that thought now; and the sound of her laughter was so unexpected in her ears that it startled her for a moment and she put a hand over her mouth to check her mirth lest it disturb some of the others.

The sound of that laugh had scarcely died before there was a knock at the door and Tom came in, looking a little pale, his face set, his eyes tired looking.

"Are you crying, Betsy?" he demanded.

"Why, no, of course not—why should I be?" she answered, startled.

"I heard you—"

"I was laughing!" Obviously he thought she was lying, and Betsy laughed again. "What the devil is there to laugh about, unless you're so happy at seeing Maynard again—he IS the man, isn't he?"

"What man?"

"The one you were in love with when you married me, of course," answered Tom, and sounded a little cross that she should require so much explanation. "I knew it the minute I saw you look at him to-night. You went into his arms, to dance, like—like—oh, like a bird going into its nest. As though you belonged there and as though there was no place else in the world where you could feel so at home."

"Oh, Tom—that's not true!" she gasped.

"It is true. Anybody not blind or a fool could have seen it. And—of course you want to be free so you can marry him—"

"In spite of the fact that he's got a perfectly good wife of whom he's very fond?"

Tom made a little gesture and said bitterly, "If he knew you were free, he'd probably get rid of his wife in a hurry—"

He stopped because Betsy had turned sharply away, her face hidden behind her hands, her shoulders shaking violently.

"Oh, darling," Tom said contritely, "please don't cry!"

"I'm not crying," sobbed Betsy. "I'm laughing."

Tom straightened as though she had slapped him.

"I don't see anything to laugh at," he snapped.

Betsy whirled to face him, her face streaked with tears, her head up, her shoulders back. "Then take a good, long look at me and laugh like the dickens because I've been such a silly, stupid little fool!" she told him shakily. "And then cry with me—because we've lost so much that we can never recapture, you and I."

Tom was very still, his arms going out to her and then drawing back as though afraid to believe what she seemed to be saying.

Betsy drew a deep breath and steadied her voice with an effort. "I'm laughing," she told him then,

"because for a year or more I made myself miserable by thinking I was in love with Dirk Maynard!"

"Thinking?" Tom caught the word as though afraid it would get away from him.

Betsy nodded. "Thinking," she repeated. "And closing my eyes to the lovely thing that was shining like the sun all around me. Thinking I was in love with him, so that I didn't have sense enough to realize that it was really YOU I loved—"

Tom recoiled a little, as though the shock of her words had been a physical impact of great force. And Betsy, misreading the look on his face, said hurriedly, "Oh, I know you're not in love with me. I'm not your type. But—if you'll just take time out to—tell me what your type is, I'll learn to be it. I swear I will!"

Tom said something under his breath that sounded like a prayer and an oath and an exclamation of sheer amazement all rolled into one word. Then he was across the room and had her in his arms, and the world obligingly stood still for both of them.

It might have been minutes, it might have been hours later—neither of them was quite certain, for nothing so prosaic as time was real to them at the moment. But a long time afterward Tom said huskily, "I've just about gone out of my mind, having you so near and yet knowing that you were not for me. Oh, Betsy, you darling, I'm so crazy about you I can just barely endure it."

"Even if I'm not—quite the type?"

"You're exactly the type—always have been, always will be, time without end," said Tom. "I only said that because I couldn't bear to see you creeping about the place scared to death of me—as though you were a small, frightened mouse and I a great, wicked cat about to pounce. So I tried to make you see that you were quite safe by telling a most colossal lie."

Betsy looked up at him, touched and sweet and palpitant with happiness. "Oh, Tommy, my dear—to think of all the time we've wasted! Let's go back to the island tomorrow and attend to our own honeymoon before the next colony arrives!"

"Spoken," said Tom ardently, "like my dearly beloved wife! What a word!"

It was then she stood on tiptoe, framing his face between her small palms, and kissed him.

NOTE—One year later, when Hitler took Austria, France was better prepared. But Germany was even more so. And far more important, Germany now had protected her great industrial area of the Ruhr and moved into the strategic Rhine Valley, for which an attack on either France or Germany is absolutely essential.

USA AND WEST AFRICA

On Thursday, May 15, 1941, it became known that France had signed a deal whereby her colonies in West Africa (and elsewhere) were turned over to Hitler's uses.

On Friday, May 16, 1941, the White House and the State Department debated all day whether President Roosevelt should send a message to Congress warning the nation what German troops and bombing planes at Dakar, on the western bulge of Africa, meant to the Monroe Doctrine.

The day passed and nothing happened. But previously many other precious days had passed.

Last autumn, after the capitulation of France, General Weygand had an army of 300,000 men in North Africa, plus a fair number of airplanes and artillery. At that time Admiral Leahy, new Ambassador to France, suggested a joint Pan-American naval expedition to Dakar, jumping-off place to South America, to prevent such a jump-off.

At that time General Weygand's army, cooperating with the British in Egypt, could have applied the pincers on the Italians, squeezed them out of Libya in no time.

But Admiral Leahy's suggestion was not seriously considered. Political sentiment in the United States, he was told, never would stand for it, and besides the United States was not prepared.

Today, the German-Italian armistice commission has dismantled all of General Weygand's airplanes, blown up his forts, disarmed his men, taken away his artillery. And what is left of the French army in North Africa, tired of waiting for the United States and Britain, has thrown in its lot with Hitler.

Arthritis Is Puzzling

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

● All too frequently we hear arthritis spoken of as if it were a single disease entity with a single cause which responded to a single form of treatment. I recently saw a clinic which dispelled this idea entirely. The object of the

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

clinician was to puzzle the medical students so that they would analyze cases of arthritis carefully and classify them so that they could be individually treated.

The first case was a middle-aged man who had an enlarged knee which he said "slipped on him." He could bend it backwards so that it looked like the last part of parenthesis. The doctor could take a leg forward and twist the knee from side to side beyond the limit of ordinary motion. There was no inflammation as is implied in the word arthritis, but there was a lack of nutrition, and the case simply was an example of a joint that had atrophied on account of disease of the nerves which went to it. The man in fact had locomotor ataxia.

Tabercular Joint

The next patient was an example of tuberculosis of the joint. The treatment here was obviously not only the treatment of the joint, but the general treatment of the nutritive condition. Then there came a patient with a bowed and stiff back, who had been treated for "arthritis" of the spine for years. She had in fact, a disorder of the ductless glands, acromegaly, which frequently leads to overgrowth of the bone end.

The next patient was quite a puzzle; a young man who had an enlarged joint which had come on quite suddenly. It showed no change in the bone whatever, but there was a doughy infiltration along the joint. It was an example of the rare blood disease, hemophilia. The patient had a history of having bled several weeks from the extraction of a tooth, and of one occasion when there was a prolonged bleeding from an inconsequential cut on the finger. But it is a fact that most of these patients present themselves as cases of arthritis because they have hemorrhage into the joints.

Disabled by Carelessness

I had a patient once who was an example of this in a butcher boy who drove a delivery wagon, and used to delight in showing off by jumping down from the seat under the shaft and then swinging with his other leg to the ground. The jolts caused hemorrhage into the joints, which gave him a great deal of permanent disability. If he had only known the nature of the disease which he had, he could have prevented himself from a lifelong crippling.

Thus we see from consideration of these cases that arthritis is not a simple thing, and dogmatic pronouncements on how to treat it are likely to be dangerous.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

W. H. K.:—"I was told grape juice would bring on hardening of the liver. Please advise if this is true and also if boiled cereal beverage causes same."

Answer—Grape juice, if it is not fermented, does not bring on hardening of the liver, nor does boiled cereal.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

BETSY SLID into Tom's arms and was a little surprised that being there should be so very pleasant. There was a marvelous sense of rightness about being there; their steps matched perfectly and the music seemed to lift them up.

"So that's the Big Moment," said Tom dryly.

Betsy set her teeth hard and after a moment she said through them, "If you try to be funny—I'll scream."

"What do you mean, try?" demanded Tom. "I can be funny about a lug like that without half trying."

Betsy stared up at him. Why, Tom was jealous! How perfectly swell! She all but beamed at him, and Tom, looking down at her said curtly, "Well, what are you looking so smug about?"

Betsy tucked her flushing face once more against his shoulder and said politely, "Nothing—just nothing at all."

Natalie gave the signal that separated the groups once more, and her own crowd tramped back to the hotel.

In her own room Betsy stood beside the open window, looking out into the soft, velvet beauty of the tropical night. There was a strange new excitement drumming in her veins. She felt an odd lightness, a sensation as though she had been running very fast and as though it would be no trouble at all to fly! And that was pretty crazy, because absolutely nothing had happened except that she had had a casual bump into a man she had once known. Fantastic to realize that she had thought herself in love with him; incredible that she had cried herself to sleep because he was so far out of her reach; impossible that she should have burned with jealousy and despair when she had heard the tone of his voice as he spoke to his wife on the telephone. And yet—it was all true!

Once she had thought that her life was doomed to loneliness and bitterness because Dirk Maynard was out of her reach. She laughed aloud at that thought now, and the sound of her laughter was so unexpected in her ears that it startled her for a moment and she put a hand over her mouth to check her mirth lest it disturb some of the others.

The sound of that laugh had scarcely died before there was a knock at the door and Tom came in, looking a little pale, his face set, his eyes tired looking.

"Are you crying, Betsy?" he demanded.

"Why, no, of course not—why should I be?" she answered, startled.

"I heard you—"

"Laughing?" Obviously he thought she was lying, and Betsy laughed again. "What the devil is there to laugh about, unless you're so happy at seeing Maynard again—he IS the man, isn't he?"

"What man?"

"The one you were in love with when you married me, of course," answered Tom, and sounded a little cross that she should require so much explanation. "I knew it the minute I saw you look at him to-night. You went into his arms, to dance, like—like—oh, like a bird going into its nest. As though you belonged there and as though there was no place else in the world where you could feel so at home."

"Oh, Tom—that's not true!" she gasped.

"It is true. Anybody not blind or a fool could have seen it. And—of course you want to be free so you can marry him—"

"In spite of the fact that he's got a perfectly good wife of whom he's very fond?"

Tom made a little gesture and said bitterly, "If he knew you were free, he'd probably get rid of his wife in a hurry—"

He stopped because Betsy had turned sharply away, her face hidden behind her hands, her shoulders shaking violently.

"Oh, darling," Tom said contritely, "please don't cry!"

"I'm not crying," sobbed Betsy. "I'm laughing."

Tom straightened as though she had slapped him.

"I don't see anything to laugh at," he snapped.

Betsy whirled to face him, her face streaked with tears, her head up, her shoulders back. "Then take a good, long look at me and laugh like the dickens because I've been such a silly, stupid little fool!" she told him shakily. "And then cry with me—because we've lost so much that we can never recapture, you and I."

Tom was very still, his arms going out to her and then drawing back as though afraid to believe what she seemed to be saying.

Betsy drew a deep breath and steadied her voice with an effort. "I'm laughing," she told him then,

"because for a year or more I made myself miserable by thinking I was in love with Dirk Maynard!"

"Thinking?" Tom caught the word as though afraid it would get away from him.

Betsy nodded. "Thinking," she repeated. "And closing my eyes to the lovely thing that was shining like the sun all around me. Thinking I was in love with him, so that I didn't have sense enough to realize that it was really YOU I loved—"

Tom recoiled a little, as though the shock of her words had been a physical impact of great force. And Betsy, misreading the look on his face, said hurriedly, "Oh, I know you're not in love with me. I'm not your type. But—if you'll just take time out to—to tell me what your type is, I'll learn to be it. I swear I will!"

Tom said something under his breath that sounded like a prayer and an oath and an exclamation of sheer amazement all rolled into one word. Then he was across the room and had her in his arms, and the world obligingly stood still for both of them.

It might have been minutes, it might have been hours later—neither of them was quite certain, for nothing so prosaic as time was real to them at the moment. But a long time afterward Tom said huskily, "I've just about gone out of my mind, having you so near and yet knowing that you were not for me. Oh, Betsy, you darling, I'm so crazy about you I can just barely endure it."

"Even if I'm not—quite the type?"

"You're exactly the type—always have been, always will be, time without end," said Tom. "I only said that because I couldn't bear to see you creeping about the place scared to death of me—as though you were a small, frightened mouse and I a great, wicked cat about to pounce. So I tried to make you see that you were quite safe by telling a most colossal lie."

Betsy looked up at him, touched and sweet and palpitant with happiness. "Oh, Tommy, my dear—to think of all the time we've wasted! Let's go back to the island tomorrow and attend to our own honeymoon, before the next colony arrives!"

"Spoken," said Tom ardently. "Like my dearly beloved wife! What a word!"

It was then she stood on tiptoe, framing his face between her small palms, and kissed him.

BEULAH PARK READY TO START ITS FINAL WEEK

COLUMBUS, May 22—Beulah Park opens the fourth and final—and biggest—week of its spring meeting of running races Monday, May 26.

Getaway week will be climaxed by two holiday programs—Memorial Day and the usual Saturday card.

Monday is to be ladies day while Tuesday will find twilight racing, which is very popular at the Grove City course, on tap. The final ladies day of the meeting is carded for Wednesday, May 28, with the last twilight program being offered on the following day.

Post time for the opening race on Tuesday and Thursday—twilight days—is 4:15 p. m. while the first event on all other days is run at 2:15 p. m.

Providing the weatherman cooperates and furnishes perfect conditions for the sport, the attendance record at the course may be shattered Friday by holiday racegoers.

ANTON NEARS TITLE SHOT

NEW YORK, May 22—Barring an upset, Anton Christoforidis will move to within a single fight of general recognition as world light heavyweight champion tonight when he takes on Gus Lee in a 15-round battle at the Madison Square Garden.

The odds were 5 to 5 on the Greek profile to accomplish his immediate goal all right, and thus qualify for the final round, where Jimmy Webb will be waiting to meet him at Promoter Mike Jacobs' convenience.

21 QUALIFY FOR MOTOR TEST AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, May 22—The qualified field for the 500-mile Indianapolis auto race on Memorial Day was raised to 21 to day after three more drivers made good on test drives over the speedway. This left 12 places open for the 33-car starting field.

Among the latest qualifiers was Kelly Pettillo of Los Angeles, 1935 winner of the 500, who turned in an average speed of 124.47 miles per hour for four laps around the two and a half mile oval.

Both fighters are claimed to be in perfect shape for the 15-round engagement at Griffith Stadium which is expected to draw 25,000 spectators and a gate of $125,000. Finishing heavy training, Louis tips the scales at 202 pounds while Baer carries 237 pounds on his six-foot-four frame.

LOUIS TO BELT YOUNGER BAER OUT IN FAST STYLE

WASHINGTON, May 22—For one buck today you can easily find a ten spot in Washington that heavyweight King Joe Louis will retain his crown tomorrow night against Buddy Baer, the younger member of the Baer clan.

Further betting in the capital is that the challenger will not go more than five rounds, with many experts predicting that the Brown Bomber will dispose of him in three.

BEULAH PARK READY TO START ITS FINAL WEEK

COLUMBUS, May 22—Beulah Park opens the fourth and final and biggest—week of its spring meeting of running races Monday, May 26.

Getaway week will be climaxed by two holiday programs — Memorial Day and the usual Saturday card.

Monday is to be ladies day while Tuesday will find twilight racing, which is very popular at the Grove City course, on tap. The final ladies day of the meeting is carded for Wednesday, May 28, with the last twilight program being offered on the following day.

Post time for the opening race on Tuesday and Thursday — twilight days—is 4:15 p. m. while the first event on all other days is run at 2:15 p. m.

Providing the weatherman cooperates and furnishes perfect conditions for the sport, the attendance record at the course may be shattered Friday by holiday racegoers.

ANTON NEARS TITLE SHOT

NEW YORK, May 22—Barring an upset, Anton Christoforidis will move to within a single fight of general recognition as world light heavyweight champion to-night when he takes on Gus Lesnevich in a 15-round battle at Madison Square Garden.

The odds were 8 to 5 on the Greek profile to accomplish his immediate goal all right, and thus qualify for the final round, where Jimmy Webb will be waiting to meet him at Promoter Mike Jacobs' convenience.

Anton, 22, is a native of Greece and has won 12 of his 18 fights.

Lesnevich, 25, is a native of Russia and has won 10 of his 18 fights.

Webb, 24, is a native of America and has won 10 of his 18 fights.

The fight will be a main event and is expected to draw 25,000 spectators and a gate of $125,000.

Finishing heavy training, Louis tips the scales at 202 pounds while Baer carries 237 pounds on his six-foot-four frame.

21 QUALIFY FOR MOTOR TEST AT INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, May 22—The qualified field for the 500-mile Indianapolis auto race on Memorial Day was raised to 21 to-day after three more drivers made good on test drives over the speedway. This left 12 places open for the 33-car starting field.

Among the latest qualifiers was Kelly Pettito of Los Angeles, 1935 winner of the 500, who turned in an average speed of 124.417 miles per hour for four laps around the two and a half mile oval.

W. M. Reid Says He's Willing To Repeal All Traffic Regulations

Claiming that merchants' proposal for thirty degree angle parking with five minutes double parking did not represent the opinions of a majority of the downtown merchants, council Wednesday night voted the merchants' plan into the safety committee and then granted the committee more time to consider the parking problem.

The merchants' proposal was presented in written form to Fred Nicholas, council clerk, by George Griffith, chairman of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce. Only four downtown business people were at the meeting.

After the proposal had been read to council by Clerk Nicholas, Councilman J. D. Mason was the first to protest the merchants' action.

"I don't think that 16 people should tell 97 what to do," he said, recalling that 16 merchants were at the meeting Monday night when the thirty-degree plan was adopted. There are 97 business houses in downtown Circleville.

Councilmen asked that a survey be made of the downtown business men and each should be asked his opinion on parking. The matter was referred to the safety committee and the survey will be conducted.

During Wednesday night's discussion, other councilmen voiced various opinions on the parking subject. Councilman George Critch, advocating the parking-meter plan said, "It isn't a question of what the merchants alone want, but one in which all, including the farmers should have a vote."

Councilman E. H. Gordon told his colleagues "Personally I am in favor of the meter system, but the farmers have complained to me about it and the farm people want angle parking."

Would Repeal All Councilman W. M. Reid threatened to introduce an ordinance repealing all parking laws unless some suitable system could be adopted soon. The ordinance already is prepared and ready to be presented. It would permit all motorists to park as they please.

The merchants' recommendations read as follows: "At the meeting of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce, May 19, regarding our traffic situation, the following proposals were voted on and passed: 1. Thirty degree angle parking on Main and Court Streets, with five minutes double parking for the purpose of loading and unloading; 2. parking meters were opposed by the majority of those present; 3. the enforcing of one-hour parking limit all through the week—Sundays excepted—in the area in which two-hour parking now is in force; 4. that parking

INJURIES FATAL TO AGED WOMAN

Mrs. Samantha Hill, 79, Of Monroe Township, Dies In Grant Hospital

Complications that followed injuries she received last Saturday when she was thrown from the automobile of her son-in-law, Roy McCafferty, caused death Tuesday in Grant Hospital, Columbus, of Mrs. Samantha Hill, 79, of Monroe Township. Mrs. Hill was taken to Grant Hospital from Berger Hospital the same day the accident happened.

Mrs. Hill received a hip fracture in the mishap. She was stepping from the McCafferty car when the driver's foot slipped off the clutch causing the auto to lurch, throwing the aged woman to the pavement on East Main Street near Court.

Mrs. Hill is survived by two daughters, Mrs. William Liston and Mrs. Victoria McCafferty of Monroe Township, and a son, Festus Hill, also of Monroe Township. The funeral will be Friday at 2 p. m. at the Festus Hill home with burial to be in Darbyville cemetery.

Judges awarded a prize to Margaret Gest, Philadelphia artist, for her painting entitled, "Pink Lilies," in an exhibition, although the picture was hung upside down.

Councilman B. H. Gordon told his colleagues "Personally I am in favor of the meter system, but the farmers have complained to me about it and the farm people want angle parking."

ARMY EASES ITS REQUIREMENT IN FLYING CADETS

Broadening of the Army's Flying Cadet educational policy to open pilot scholarships to youths heretofore ineligible without examination, was announced today at Fifth Corps Area Headquarters, Fort Hayes, Columbus.

The new policy permits candidates to substitute college credits for any examination subject, reduces the number of required subjects from nine to five and provides two optional ones.

College undergraduates lacking two full years of credit heretofore were required to take the full examination covering subjects taught in most high schools. Now they may be exempt if their college subjects cover those prescribed.

The changes will become effective with examinations scheduled August 12, 13 and 14 in larger cities of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana.

The new examination drops

geography adds inorganic chemistry and modern languages and relegates history and physics to the optional field. Required subjects will be English composition and grammar, arithmetic, algebra to include quadratics, plane geometry and plane trigonometry. Examinees may choose two optional subjects from United States history, general history, elementary physics, inorganic chemistry, any modern language except English.

Candidates must first make formal application as Flying Cadets and must pass the prescribed physical, examination. Applications may be made at army recruiting offices by male American citizens at least 20 years old and not yet 27.

"I don't think that 16 people should tell 97 what to do," he said, recalling that 16 merchants were at the meeting Monday night when the thirty-degree plan was adopted. There are 97 business houses in downtown Circleville.

Councilman Mason asked that a survey be made of the downtown business men and each should be asked his opinion on parking. The matter was referred to the safety committee and the survey will be conducted.

During Wednesday night's discussion, other councilmen voiced various opinions on the parking subject. Councilman George Critch, advocating the parking-meter plan said, "It isn't a question of what the merchants alone want, but one in which all, including the farmers should have a vote."

Councilman B. H. Gordon told his colleagues "Personally I am in favor of the meter system, but the farmers have complained to me about it and the farm people want angle parking."

Would Repeal All
Councilman W. M. Reid threatened to introduce an ordinance repealing all parking laws unless some suitable system could be adopted soon. The ordinance already is prepared and ready to be presented. It would permit all motorists to park as they please.

The merchants' recommendations read as follows: "At the meeting of the Retail Merchants Division of the Chamber of Commerce, May 19, regarding our traffic situation, the following proposals were voted on and passed: 1. Thirty degree angle parking on Main and Court Streets, with five minutes double parking for the purpose of loading and unloading; 2. parking meters were opposed by the majority of those present; 3. the enforcing of one-hour parking limit all through the week—Sundays excepted—in the area in which two-hour parking now is in force; 4. that parking

A Bren-Load of Patriotism

BIG thrill of "War Weapons Week" for these children in Leiston, England, was the ride they were given in a Bren carrier named after Winston Churchill. A goal of $75,000 had been set for Leiston, a Suffolk community of 4,000 population. It raised over $200,000 to help increase the armed might of Britain's forces.

be allowed only on one side of Franklin Street from Court to Pickaway and only on one side of Scioto from Franklin to Pinckney Street.

"We recommend that Council suspend the rules and vote on the above proposed ordinance for immediate passage. It also was recommended that a committee from Council be appointed to work with a committee of retail merchants to make a survey for available space to provide a parking lot or parking lots to further relieve our congested traffic condition on main thoroughfares."

Police Force Inadequate
Main objection to the merchants' proposal was the five-minute double-parking clause. Police representatives at the council meeting maintained that five-minute double parking could not possibly be checked with the present force. Also state laws prohibit double parking, they claimed, and said that state highway patrolmen had told them that if council passed an ordinance granting a double parking privilege on Main or Court Streets, highway patrolmen would arrest double-parkers themselves.

Judges awarded a prize to Margaret Gest, Philadelphia artist, for her painting entitled, "Pink Lilies," in an exhibition, although the picture was hung upside down.

ARMY EASES ITS REQUIREMENT IN FLYING CADETS

Broadening of the Army's Flying Cadet educational policy to open pilot scholarships to youths heretofore ineligible without examination, was announced today at Fifth Corps Area Headquarters, Fort Hayes, Columbus.

The new policy permits candidates to substitute college credits for any examination subject, reduces the number of required subjects from nine to five and provides two optional ones.

College undergraduates lacking two full years of credit heretofore were required to take the full examination covering subjects taught in most high schools. Now they may be exempt if their college subjects cover those prescribed.

The changes will become effective with examinations scheduled August 12, 13 and 14 in larger cities of Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana.

The new examination drops

geography adds inorganic chemistry and modern languages and relegates history and physics to the optional field. Required subjects will be English composition and grammar, arithmetic, algebra to include quadratics, plane geometry and plane trigonometry. Examinees may choose two optional subjects from United States history, general history, elementary physics, inorganic chemistry, any modern language except English.

Candidates must first make formal application as Flying Cadets and must pass the prescribed physical examination. Applications may be made at army recruiting offices by male American citizens at least 20 years old and not yet 27.
